

ENERGY MARKET ANALYST

A role for a bright young graduate at EnergyAction.

This role will suit a bright and responsible person, willing to get into the detail of complex processes within the electricity market and apply the knowledge and understanding they develop to our pricing systems and promote this to our suppliers. The role may evolve into an outward facing and commercially oriented role with a long term career path.

EnergyAction is a dynamic and responsive energy brokerage and energy consultancy. Our success is founded on developing scalable solutions to our customers needs. Based in Parramatta in Sydney's west, we are a vibrant and intelligent group of people doing the best for our business, our customers and our future. This placement is for a graduate, working closely with our retail energy brokerage team and reporting to the Director of Operations, to plan, develop and implement an electricity pricing and reporting system for small electricity and gas customers. This line of business exists within our operations, but requires substantial remodelling and organisation.

Goals and Outcomes are:

The successful candidate will coordinate a series of existing data and pricing reporting models, and develop a process to request prices from retailers, and report the outcome of these requests to the customer. The candidate will demonstrate an ability to learn, and a keen interest in working as part of a team.

Essential skills and attributes include:

Highly numerate with an ability to learn, the successful candidate for this position will demonstrate a willingness to work as part of a team; and possess excellent communication (written and oral) skills. Significantly, the candidate will be confident of working in an excel or access environment with large volumes of data.

Desirable skills and attributes include:

It is desirable that the successful candidate also possess an ability to work with minimal supervision, be able to write VBA code in an MS environment, and be confident and comfortable securing outcomes from external parties.

This role will ideally suit a confident and well organised thinker, from an arts, science or business background. The applicant will receive the inside running on one of Australia's most diverse and exciting industries: the energy industry.
